

From: john stephen naulty
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/29/01 12:39pm
Subject: Re: Macs Only! News, Commentary, Reviews & Troubleshooting

I strongly object to the proposed settlement of the microsoft monopoly case-microsoft's offer to supply computers (undoubtedly using microsoft OS and software exclusively) and Microsoft software to needy schools merely serves to reward and advance their monopolistic tactics- surely you are aware that 'giving' away software that is already developed essentially costs microsoft nothing except the cost of the cd media...and serves only to further entrench microsoft hardware and software in an arena (perhaps the only arena) in which microsoft does not control and supply all the software already.

J. Stephen Naulty MD
Director, Yale Center for Pain Management
Department of Anesthesiology
Yale University School of Medicine
333 Cedar Street
New Haven CT 06510